Conclusion (Innovation what makes it good practice, further application)	Virtual reality is a great tool to enhance learning, especially during childhood. As it entertains the student, he feels more relaxed and this reduction in apprehension is favorable for learning contents that are generally more difficult. In addition, it is possible to make children interact better with each other, which also contributes to the learning of a class. Not to mention that many games are made from repetition and doing an activity more than once contributes a lot for students to better understand the subject.
